ADDRESS OF MR. WENDELL PHILLIPS AT THE

ACADEMY OF MUSIC LAST EVENING. ACADEMY OF MUSIC LAST EVENIAU.

Mr. Wendell Phillips last evening delivered a lecture upon Daniel O'Connell at the Academy of Music in this city. The audience was good, and frequently applauded the speaker. Upon the stand were several Catholic Clergymen, as follows: The Rev. Thomas Farrell, the Rev. Sylvester Malone, the Rev. Joseph P. Woods, the Rev. Henry Coyle, the Rev. David Mullane, the Rev. Thomas Farrell, the Rev. Henry Coyle, the Rev. David Mullane, the Rev. the Rev. James O'Leary, D. D., and the Rev. Dr. Moriarty. Mr. Aaron M. Powell introduced Mr. Phillips with a brief and pleasant speech. Mr. Phillips came forward amid ap-possible Government produces the freest possible and women, the most individual, the least service to the judgment of each other. But a moment's reflection will show any man that this was an unnatural and unfounded axpectation, and that, on the contrary, the tendency toward atter equality and freedom in political forms almost inevitably lends to make the individual subside into the mass, and loss his identity in the general whole. Suppose we stood in England to-night. There is the nobility, and there is the Church. There is the trading class, and here is the literary. A broad gulf reparates the four; and, provided the member of either can stand all his own section, he can afford, in a very large measure, to dispose and dispense with a judgment in the other three. He is a refuge, and a breakwater against the tyranny of what we call public opinion. But in a country like ours, of absolute democratic equality, public opinion is not only omnipotent—it is omnipresent. There it no refuge from its tyranny. There is no hiding from its reach, and the result is that if you take the old Greek lantern, and go about to seek among a hundred, you will find not one single American who really has not, or who does not fancy at least that he has, something to gain or to lose in his ambition, his social life, or his business, from the good opinion and the votes of those about him. And the consequence is that instead of being a mass of individuals, each one fearlessly burting out his own convictions; as a nattor, compared with other midions, we are a mark of power. More than all other people, we are affead of each other. If you were a caucus to-night, and the consequence is that instead of being a mass of individuals, each one fearlessly burting out his own convictions as a nattor, compared with other midions, would not allow me to utter one word or what you would not nillow me to utter one word or what you would not nillow me to utter one word or what you would emand. It hought. You would demand, you would emand—that I should not u and we only regret the absurd and unfounded statement with which he properly and obliting of the Catholic faith had giving up all hope, and the soal with which he ground the soal the soal that the principal down into the blackness of despair, that O'Conneil, just then admitted the philosophical, the essential limitations of a press in a republican community. Our institutions for sorting an anchored on the shifting surface of popular opinion, carnot afford to hold beck or to drag forward a hair and to consider it. Hence, as you see at one the noment a large its line, twenty years a hear of its age, presents large its line, twenty years a hear of its age, presents large its line, twenty years a hear of its age, presents large its platforms outside of the prese, of politics, and of its church, whereon stand men with no enablate so elect, with no object but the truth, no purpose but to ear the squestion open, and let the light through it. From to day to the dawn of November you will not hear a word of absolute conviction from the lips of the Art that he should hook at a such Precidential canvass, So much like the should hook at a such Precidential canvass, so much like the should have a such as a such progress of modern government has developed more and more every day. We trace its origin probably to the stormy period of the Long Parliaments, though, in general, history gives the credit of initiating it to Daniel Defoc, the author of Robinson Crussee, and the first famous Englishman noted for flinging pamphlets in the face of the House of Charles, and the second of the progress of the Carnot of the Long Parliaments, though, in general, history gives the credit of initiating it to Daniel Defoc, the author of Robinson Crussee, and the first famous Englishman noted for flinging pamphlets in the face of the House of Charles and the progress of the carnot of the consecution of the consecut The control of the co

the Code of which an English Lord Chancellor said, almost in the identical phrase of Chief-Justice Taney, when he infamously asserted that a negro had no rights which a white man was bound to respect. This was the Code of which an English Lord Chancellor said, "the theory of the English law does not admit that an Irish Catholic has a right to breathe. This was the code, finally, of which Montesquie asserted that it was conceived by the devil, written in human blood, and registered in hell. [Applause.] It remained for a full century in operation, and if it had been possible to carry it out in its full bitterness the Irish nation would be now matter of history. But the connivance of Protestant England, the gentle courtesies of the human beart, the irrepressible sympathies of neighborhood and relationship, checked the full career of this deviliah legislation; and although it remained in effect a full century; until 1793, although it steeped Ireland in blood, and suik her to the midst in wrotehedness, poverty, andignorance, it still had only a half-way career. In 1793 the dread of the French Revolution on the other side of the Channel awed England into justice. Treland into sever woo one single steep from the justice of England is she got all she has got from her fears: (applause.) In 1793, dreading the effect of the French Revolution, and at the bidding of repeated manrections, England finity swept away some of the harsh features of this code. Of course, during this long century, Iredand rose again and again in robellion. Like the classic legend of the giant hidden beneath the Island of Stelly, and disturbing the Mediterranean by his struggles, for unry, of blessed struggles for justice, equality and right. [Applause.] But the strongest monarcy of Europe was always conqueror until 1782, when the great profestant rising—for it was a selfish and a protestant rising—mainly led by Grattan and his fellow—summoned the Irish volunteers, 50,000 strong, into existence, but the rising earth-agus, of French disturbance, and

[Applause.] It was at such a moment as this, at the very close of the last century, when the hierarchy and nobility of the Catholic faith had giving up all hope, and the scattered million of peasantry had settled down into the blackness of despair, that O'conneil, just then admitted to the bar, pledged himself to his countrymen that if they would follow him he would yet lead them to the level of Brutish statesmanship. (Applause.) The first speech which he made was a protest against the Union in January, 130e, at a meeting which was dispersed immediately afterward by the bayonets of the soldiers. He married two years later, he devoted himself for a few years to his profession, and then he became suddenly absorbed again in political agitation. Mark with me a moment the situation in which he found himself. The hierarchy of the Catholic Church, who had seen their flock led again and again to slaughter a score of times in the century, were too sick at heart to venture a new effort; the nobility of the Catholic faith were too sad to lead in their struggle; the ness; and then burst forth the fearless cry—and my second vote is for O'Connell's man—and sunk dead in the way. The firsh andflords brought down heir vengeance with rapid strides. O'Connell summoned them to Dublin and minstered for 26 days, to their wards. He knowing well that some of the landlords went all them to Dublin and minstered for 26 days to their wards. Senator Wilson made a very strong and radical speech, asserting that the Republican party had never yet falled to carry their point, and he assured his hearers that they to carry their point, and he assured his hearers that they would not fail on Saturday next.

The Commercial Advertiser's Washington correspondent says: "Col. It is true, as reported, that Coi. Forney has tendered his resignation as Secretary of the Senate, to take effect on the election of his successor. His letter to this effect was placed in the hands of Senator Wade last night. The principal reason for this course is, as he privately ex-plains to his friends, that he may not be restrained by official position from commenting upon the course of the Republican Senators who do not sustain the conviction be brewed, manufactured, and sold, or removed for consumption or sale. The provision of the old law for the removal of fermented liquor for storage, without being previously stamped, is stricken out. The most marked change in the law is in the department of distilled spirits. The new law is drawn with clearness and perspicuity. The arrangement as to fines and penalties is in such a way as to leave but little business to the discretion of the County. The tax is retained of $2 agallon, although it is said that a majority of the Committee was in favor of a lower tax. The principal feature of this section of the law is, that the distilling can be carried on only by the holders of the fee-simple of the property; or on ease where the ground on which the distillery is situated is leased, the owner of the distillery must bring in an instrument from the owner of the ground consenting to the use of the premises for distilling purposes, and that he fully understands the obligation which he assumes by the lease of the premises for such purposes. A non-compliance with this condition forfeits the entire property. Any person permitting his premises to be used as a means of excess or ingress for illicit distilleries is amenable to the loss of his property. The license fee is increased on every registered distillery having a still or stills intended for the distillation of spirits, and of an aggregate ouble capacity of not more than 300 galons, $3 a day, and in addition, $4 per day for every measure of cubic capacity of logalons or fractional part thereof in excess of 500 galons; but any distillers who shall stop work as provided by this act, shall not be compelled to pay on any distillery more than $2 per day during the time the work shall be so suspended in his district. The provisions touching distilled spirits cover 50 sections of the new hill. The tax in all cases is to be paid at the distillery. No transportation in bond is allowed, except for exportation. The tax is to be prepaid by means of stamps, and no barrel is allo At that moment O'Connell entered the House. Twenty-seven gentiemen, who were called the West India interest, the Bristol party, the Slave party, went to him. Said they: "O'Connell, 27 votes—you have not one—27 votes if you never will go to Free Masons' Hall with Buckstone and Brougham, if you are never found at an Anti-Slavery meeting there—all this solid column on every Irish question: stop there, and count us your opponents." It was a terrible temptation, says Buckstone, A man might almost be pardoned for yielding. But, said he, O'Connell turned: said he: "Gentlemen, God knows that I have the most hapless constituency upon which the sun ever set, but may my right hand forget its cusning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth before to help Ireland I keep silent on the negro question. [Applause.] Never, said Buckstone, from that day, never did Lushington and myself wilk out of the lobby that O'Connell did not follow us. Again, they sent him 1,000 pounds once from New-Orleans, the slaveholders to the Catholic Kepeal Association; the bill was laid on the table of Conciliation Hall, and the liberator took it up; said he, "God knows how poor we are, how much we need it; but, thank God! Ireland is not poor enough yet to take the wages of unpaid toil. [Applause.] To an Alabama planter who asked admission to the House of Commons, he refused it. Said he, "I do not think a slaveholder ought to be received on terms of equality by a civilized European." [Applause.] A Boston man going to his house in Marion-square, he came to his door, receiving him with both hands, as was his wont. With genial hospitality, says he, "Sir, you are welcome. I am glad to see suybody from Massachusotts, fit is a free State. Walk in, You are a welcome guest." And he drew him into his parior. The gentleman sald: "Ah! you speak of Slavery, Mr. O'Connell. I would like to discuss with you the justice of one man's owning another, just let me look up my spoons." (Great laughter.] Well, I left him in 181, or 182, in London. He was standing in L

THE SURRATT TRIAL. WASHINGTON, May 12 .- In the Criminal Court of this District, Chief-Justice Carter presiding, the case of John H. Burratt was called up this morning. The number of spectators was very few. The prisoner was brought into the Court room at about 10½ o'clock, and seated within the bar, near his counsel. Messrs. Merrick and Bradley, jr., Jos. H. Bradley, counsel for defense on the former trial, was present as advisory counsel. The United States was represented by Messrs. Carrington, District-Attorney, Wilson, Assistant District-Attorney, and A. G. Riddle, Associate Counsel, Judge Black, who has been mentioned as one of the counsel for the defense, was not present, nor was Judge Pierrepont for the Government. The case having been called, Mr Carrington said that he was ready to draw a jury and commence the trial. Mr. Merrick then said that from a conversation which he had had with Judge Pierrepont shortly after the 24th of April hast, the time which had been set for the trial, he had become impressed with the conviction that the time should he continued; and therefore the defense had laid aside its preparations, not expecting the case to be called during this term. Mr. Carrington had not heard of any agreement, and said that it never was his intention or desire to continue the case. He had been exerting himself to get ready, and was anxious to swear a jury and proceed with the trial. He protested against continuance unless good reasons were presented. After further remarks by counsel, the court made known its disposition to let the case go over to the next term. Mr. Merrick then made a medion to admit the prissner to bail, and it was determined by the Court to hear arguments from counsel on the motion to-morrow morning. The witnesses were discharged until further notice. of John H. Surratt was called up this morning. The
